

GSA Encourages Public to Make Use of Standards

The Ghana Standards Authority (GSA) has called on the general public to make use of quality standards in order to ensure that goods produced in the country are safe for consumption.

The Authority said that they existed to develop standards that will help ensure that consumers and the environment are protected.

Speaking in an interview on ZED FM, the Acting Head of Public Relations at the GSA, Mr. Kofi Yeboah Debrah, APR, noted that the GSA since its existence has developed a plethora of standards in various sectors of the economy which seeks to improve the quality of life of Ghanaians and help in the development of the country.

“The GSA has developed plenty standards ranging from cosmetics, food and drinks, building and construction standards, petroleum standards among others which will enable the country develop while protecting its consumers. We entreat all Ghanaians to approach the GSA to learn about these standards to improve their lives,” he said.

He said standards save lives and his Institution has been active in recent times through the establishment of various laboratories and the recruitment of new staff (TSIs) to help promote the Authority’s activities, facilitate trade, and enforce standards across the country.

He appealed to the public to get involved with standardisation activities and help the GSA promote its activities.

“Please play an active role in Standardisation in the country, when you see something wrong, please report it to our offices so we can help protect the consumers which will in turn bring development to the country,” Mr. Debrah added.
