The Ghana Standards Authority (GSA) is participating in the 2nd edition of the International Concrete Conference and Exhibition (ICCX) happening from April 16-17, 2024, in Accra.

The ICCX West Africa was established in 2023 as the new meeting point for the concrete and precast industry and features discussions and exhibitions of concrete, cement and other materials in the precast industry.

The Conference seeks to engage participants on thought-provoking discussions centred on concrete and the precast industry and will feature presentations and exhibition of concrete and precast products and services all over Europe and Africa.

The Director-General of the GSA, Professor Alex Dodoo, is part of a panel discussion that will feature top experts in the industry to discuss the standards and modern trends of concrete and precast materials in the world over.

“The GSA sees ICCX West Africa as a unique opportunity to create a solid networking platform for the concrete industry in West Africa. As GSA, we stand for sustainable and quality-oriented construction and promote our Building Code here, which can be seen as a kind of one-stop shop for all building solutions in Ghana,” a statement from the Authority noted.
